

A PROPOSAL

What we build before February

Turning four years of delivery into something a voter can check — in the five months before nominations.

You have done more than anyone can check.

Not a criticism of the work. A description of the paper trail. Every figure attached to your programmes counts what went out. Almost nothing counts what came back.

54% of Nandi has not decided. They will choose the candidate who can show them something, and right now nobody in this race is showing anything.

FOUR YEARS, FOUR PROGRAMMES

650k

Coffee seedlings to roughly 4,000 women, all six sub-counties

449

Students on full scholarship. 206 sitting
KCSE this year

499

Teams across all 30 wards
in three months

2.7m

Shillings in ward-level prize money, men and women

Plus a fully kitted ambulance at Kabyemit Dispensary, Mosop — your own initiative. Boots for shoe shiners. Empowerment cheques, boda shades, water and school projects.

Every one of those numbers counts a giveaway.

WHAT WE CAN SHOW

Inputs

Seedlings handed over. Cheques presented. Teams registered.

That difference is what separates a giveaway from a record — and it is entirely fixable.

WHAT DECIDES VOTES

Outcomes

Trees that survived. Cherry sold. Money that reached a woman's own hands.

Other people own your best moments.

Views on TikTok clips of you speaking. Four of the top five are other people's uploads of your own footage.

When a controversy breaks, the clip that travels is the one somebody else edited.

Same account. Same
face. One line of text.

No budget. No approval. It can start this week.

The story is smaller than it looks.

We read fourteen Nandi Facebook groups from the inside and had the Kalenjin translated. Searching oripoo in the 50,000-member Nandi Hills forum returns three posts — one of them supportive.

The rejection post carries 3 reactions and 35 shares. That is content being pushed, not spreading.

The cultural line is specific and checkable, not a slur — which means it can be answered with facts. The reason it ran at all is that nobody holds your original footage. That is the structural fix, not a statement.

Somebody has already written the hard question.

Bring the numbers. Bring the beneficiary lists. Bring the procurement records.

CIRCULATING IN THE NANDI HILLS GROUPS

No gender, no culture, no insults — which is exactly why it is dangerous.
It also asks the one thing nobody has answered: if the trees mature and there is no factory or buyer, what then?

Better to answer it first, in our own words, with our own evidence.

THE FILM

A payment slip with a woman's name on it.

A 24-minute documentary on Kahawa na Mama. Not a profile — a record. Trees planted in 2023 are bearing now, and that three-year before-and-after can be filmed this season and never again.

The programme's real innovation is not the seedlings. It is the charter putting a wife's name beside her husband's on a coffee bush. Almost nobody knows it exists.

Screened across the six sub-counties in January, in village halls before the internet.

SIXTEEN WEEKS

One short a week, every week, until nominations.

■ Oct – establish ■ Nov – the harvest ■ Dec – the argument ■ Jan – the case

Every short ends on one checkable fact with its source named on screen. Plus same-day clips from every public appearance, so your words travel with your context attached.

THE EVIDENCE BASE

One place where every claim can be checked.

Sourced figures

Beneficiary counts by ward, partners, funding split, dates. Each with where it came from.

The testimony library

Farmers and students on the record, in their own words, searchable and permanent.

A visual identity

One mark, one type system. Right now nothing you post is recognisable as yours by sight.

Some figures currently circulate in more than one version — scholarships as both 409 and 449, for instance. Pinning them down protects you.

TEA

The biggest crop in Nandi. Nobody has claimed it.

Coffee is yours. But tea is where most of Nandi's money is, and no aspirant in this race has taken a position on bonus rates, factory financing, or who controls the payment.

You already have the method.
Kahawa na Mama started by asking women what they didn't control about a cash crop.

Run that same diagnostic at tea. Listening forums in the tea wards, and publish what farmers actually say. Not a manifesto promise from a podium — a record of the question being asked, which is the thing nobody else is doing.

Research first, position second. Tea politics is genuinely contested and arriving with the wrong answer is worse than arriving with the question.

The set-piece is already in your calendar.

Thirty wards. 499 teams. 846 matches. Built in three months. That is not a sports programme, it is an organising network with named people in every ward of Nandi.

The county grand finale falls in December 2026 — weeks before nominations. It is funded, it is running, and nothing currently treats it as the moment it is.

Five months, four moves.

SEPTEMBER

Verify & cast

Confirm the harvest window. Count surviving trees. Find the four farmers. Pin every figure.

OCT - DEC

Film

The harvest cannot be rescheduled. Shorts publish weekly from week one.

DECEMBER

The finale

BOSO county final, filmed as the set-piece it is.

JANUARY

Release

Film out, screening tour of six sub-counties, ahead of nominations.

One thing to confirm this week: the exact local coffee harvest window. The whole schedule hangs on it.

What I do — and what I don't.

MINE TO BUILD

- The documentary, end to end — camera, sound, edit
- The weekly shorts and same-day capture
- The evidence website and data system
- Visual identity, graphics, data explainers
- The testimony library and photo archive

I am not offering to run your social media. I am offering to build the evidence your record deserves — starting with the film, because the trees are bearing now.

NEEDS OTHER PEOPLE

- Polling — a licensed research firm
- Legal, compliance, campaign finance
- Ward organising and agent recruitment
- Campaign management and message discipline
- Counsel on the cultural questions, from someone with standing in Nandi
