

The Film

A documentary record of Kahawa na Mama, built around the moment a woman is paid in her own name.

STARTS SEPT
DELIVERS JANUARY

WHY IT MATTERS

Every figure attached to the programme counts what was given out. None counts what came back. That is the difference between a giveaway and a record, and it is the gap opponents are already pointing at in public.

Trees planted in 2023 are bearing now. The three-year before-and-after can be filmed this season and never again.

WHAT GETS BUILT

- A 24-minute documentary following four farmers across the programme, from nursery to payment slip
- A shorter hall cut for rallies, churches and community screenings where 24 minutes will not hold
- A testimony library of 30+ full interviews, archived and indexed by name, ward and phase
- A stills archive for print, press and the website
- An honest section on what did not work — the trees that died and why

TIMELINE

Sept cast and verify · Oct-Dec filming, tied to the harvest · Jan release and screening tour

WHAT I NEED

Introduction to four or five farmers and to the cooperative. Any 2023 photographs of planted plots. Permission to film freely.

EXECUTED BY

Me, personally — camera, sound, interviews, edit, subtitles, grade.

DONE LOOKS LIKE

A film screened in six sub-counties before it goes online, and a permanent archive of farmers on the record in their own words.

WHY THIS SEASON AND NOT NEXT

The before-and-after only exists while the change is still visible. By 2027 a bearing tree looks ordinary.
